Now that the Chiefs of the Fire Department have declared that there are no more bodies in the Park place ruins, the Morgue has beome the great point of interest for those who are looking for friends or relatives supposed to have perished in the awful disaster.

Up to 3 o'clock to-day the record shows that forty-nine bodies of the sixty-one dug out of the ruins have been identified. Of the fifty-five charred and mangled bodies which have been taken to the Morgue, there are twelve still unrecognized. Four of the new identifications were made this morning. They are those of Newman Goldschmidt, Charles Baumgarten, Willam McPherson and Charles Henry Dowley. powever, and thinned out as the day ad-

ESOP ON CURRENT EVENTS.

A man, who was looking out to sea, saw in the distance what appeared to be a large ship, and waited to see it enter the harbor. But as the object on which he looked came nearer to the shore he decided that it must be a small boat and not a ship. When, however, it reached the beach he discovered that it was only a bundle of sticks.

Things which are very imposing at a distance are often seen to amount to very little when an opportunity enables one to examine them closely.
